

I think it vitally important that the AEMC accept the demand management incentive scheme rule change. It will make the our energy market fairer for consumers.

I have solar panels on my roof and this helps reduce my power bills while reducing the need for large power plants. Power companies should be helping people go solar not trying to rip them off or make it difficult to have solar. Rising power bills are crippling lots of families which is stupid when we can get power free from the sun particularly here in Australia.
